

"Harking Back" by Jane Minton. Fifty Years ago. January 25, 1939.

Unheard of and believed dead for nearly 17 years and whose mysterious disappearance from Pinckneyville on April 1, 1922, came near resulting in mob violence to an innocent Negro, PHILIP MANDA has written relatives at the county seat that he is well and happy at Newbury Park, Cal. The letter telling of Manda's whereabouts was addressed to his daughter, Mrs. Fred Thornton, whose death at Pinckneyville occurred some time back. The letter was delivered to another member of the family there. Manda in other years lived with his family in DuQuoin at the corner of Walnut and Perry streets in the former William Goddard property. He engaged in teaming and was regarded as a substantial respected citizen. Later the family moved to Pinckneyville. Manda's wife has since made here home in Pinckneyville with members of her family. His recent letter has been answered and further details of his wanderings during the past 16 years are expected.

- - - - -

Mrs. Augusta Manda lived at 101 E. Hawkins St., Pinckneyville, Il with her son-in-law, James Ferd Thornton, and took care of his children whose mother had died. I believe that the Prudential Ins. Company made payment on this man after seven years had elapsed. There was a man with relatives here in town always said that he knew where Philip Manda was.

Elizabeth Eiker Spurgeon,
710 Taffee,
Pinckneyville, Il 62274
Jan. 26th, 1989.

"Harking Back" by Jane Minton.

Fifty Years ago. January 25, 1939.

Unheard of and believed dead for nearly 17 years and whose mysterious disappearance from Pinckneyville on April 1, 1922, came near resulting in mob violence to an innocent Negro, PHILIP MANDA has written relatives at the county seat that he is well and happy at Newbury Park, Cal. The letter telling of Manda's whereabouts was addressed to his daughter, Mrs. Fred Thornton, whose death at Pinckneyville occurred some time back. The letter was delivered to another member of the family there. Manda in other years lived with his family in DuQuoin at the corner of Walnut and Perry streets in the former William Goddard property. He engaged in teaming and was regarded as a substantial respected citizen. Later the family moved to Pinckneyville. Manda's wife has since made here home in Pinckneyville with members of her family. His recent letter has been answered and further details of his wanderings during the past 16 years are expected.

- - - - -

Mrs. Augusta Manda lived at 101 E. Hawkins St., Pinckneyville, Il with her son-in-law, James Ferd Thornton, and took care of his children whose mother had died. I believe that the Prudential Ins. Company made payment on this man after seven years had elapsed. There was a man with relatives here in town always said that he knew where Philip Manda was.

Elizabeth Eiker Spurgeon,
710 Taffee,
Pinckneyville, Il 62274
Jan. 26th, 1989.